

THE ORIGIN OF THINGS

by

John Steely

Evolution? Never in a billion years! It is a hoax, an academic fraud that cannot be sustained by reason or observable fact.

If students were taught to think for themselves in the government controlled brainwashing cells cynically called public schools, the whole concept of biological evolution would be laughed out of countenance and collapse overnight.

If the world wasn't made by a Creator, then ask the professors – those high priests and gurus of the official state religion called Humanism – how all the matter and energy in the universe brought itself into existence OUT OF NOTHING.

There is a ceaseless endeavor to promote the lie. The narrator on one episode of a public television program said, without blushing. “These monkeys evolved their long prehensile tails to facilitate their swinging through the trees.” Then, a couple of episodes later showed, without comment, a tribe of monkeys swinging merrily through the trees with only tiny stubs for tails!

On another show some pseudo-scientists told us over and over how a single pair of birds “evolved” into several species on a certain recently formed island. But that is a variation within species; it is not evolution. They weren't changing into trees or mushrooms or squirrels or snakes. There was “scientific” snake-oil, but no snakes.

In the name of “survival,” are we to believe that one creature evolved upward into other creatures which then turned around and preyed on their “parents” in a patricidal food chain?

How does one account for human agony and ecstasy, love and hate?

How did creatures survive while they were evolving the healing process and weapons of defense?

How did creatures survive while learning to reproduce? Given the slow process of “evolution” the first primordial creature must have lived for millions of years while blindly struggling through trial and error, to replicate itself, or the same creature must have been “evolved” over and over again in great numbers, in either case there was no incentive to reproduce.

And, are we to suppose that a male and female of every species just happened to evolve at the same time and in the same place?

Why haven't the worms crawled out of the ground and evolved eyes? Why don't we have at least three arms and eyes in the backs of our heads?

Fish in dark underground caverns have lost their eyesight through atrophism, or lack of use. If it is the fate of an existing organ to be lost through the lack of use, then an organ which has not come into existence cannot be used and, therefore, cannot EVOLVE into existence.

If the eye could not have evolved, then it was created, and if the complex eye was created, then so was everything else. It may or may not be in the textbooks, but atrophism precludes evolution.

To the human mind there are only two possibilities: that the universe and everything in it was created, or that it came into existence by itself out of nothing. Neither view is subject to scientific proof and can only be accepted on belief or faith. No one can certify to knowledge of the origin of things. It is the great mystery of life.

Real science and the laws of probability say that evolution, with its deceptive reliance on blind faith, is a colossal con. If some smart monkey decided to keep jumping off of a high cliff until it learned how to fly, it couldn't develop wings and feathers if it jumped a million times. Besides, even the professors know it would only jump once.